A SCANDAL TO THE SERVICE GUAYAMA UNDER OLD GLORY

Particulars of the Schley-Sampson Naval Controversy.

MODEST MERIT PERSECUTED

The Times Was Right in Declaring That Sampson's Published Report Was Not the First One of Schicy's Victory-That Was Suppressed for Prudential Reasons,

The recent announcement that naval and military boards will be appointed to pass upon deserved promotions in both branches of the service has revived the old Schley-Sampson controversy, and as must be officially settled by substantial reward, the friends of both men grow more pronounced in their individual boards or commissions will be con to the ranks below that of captain. Taus, advanced, holding up his hands. An the promotion of Commodore Schley will come beneath the immediate notice the President, and hence the matter has not been removed from its original status. Now that the lapse of several weeks has cooled the discussion to some extent a dispassionate statement from a high naval officer who is in close touch with the workings of his department is of considerable interest. Under promise that his name should not appear, the of-ficial referred to gave the following interview to a Times reporter yesterday;

"I. like every other attache of the department, have my personal convictions in the matter, but for verious reais would be unwise for me to ex-ploft them. Personally, I am neither a Schloy nor a Sampson man is the sense that many others are who have created bitter enmittles in the service by their open partisanship; but I believe in fair cay and the placing of honor and reward where they properly belong. Eliminating all other considerations, the fact that the famous bavai battle was wan under the immediate command of Schley, and there is no more excuse for robbing him of the bener of it than for denying that Admiral Dewey should have the reward for his victory at Mania. True, Samp-son came in at the finish; but the man be had left in command of the fleet won tight. Sampson has always been a favorite in the Navy Department under the present Administration. When his command was joined at Santiago by Schley's squadron there was a tide of criticism against placing him in absolute command of the situation, and to interrupt its conse-quences the order was issued for the North Atlantic squadron to absorb the flying squadron, which left Schley with-out a command and naturally put Samp-son in undisputed control, since Schley's squadron was the one absorbed. It is clearly within the province of the Navy Department to say what officer shall command a squadron, but so long as two independent squadrons were lying one beside the other there was bound to be friction in subordinating a senior officer commanding. This was an injustice that should have been rebuked.

"When the first news of the famous Santiago haval engagement reached Washington the Navy Department was greatly chagrined to hear that its favorits had been left out of it, expecting, as a matter of course, that Schley would laim the honor due him. But when Sampson come to the front with his erotlism and attempted to usurp the glory of unother, his action occasioned surprise another, his action occasioned surprise even among his friends, but they were willing to accept him as their hero. Public sentiment rebelled at once, and through the latter controversy that fol-lowed the dignified silence of Schley commanded the respect of even his enemier which are political and not personal, I

President, I understand, withheld Judgment until Sampson's first report of the battle was received. It was of the following cable message from such a flagrant violation of the justice Gen. Miles late yesterday afternoon; due his rival that the department decided suppress it, and the commodore was advised to write another more conservalive account of the affair, which he did. and his second report was published. Had Sampson been less eager to claim a monopoly of the glory it had been better for him. I believe he has lost the Prestdent's former friendship, and I am cer-tain that Schiey will be rewarded as he

It seems to be understood that both men will be promoted to positions of equal rank but the President will prob-ably favor giving Schley the first advance to a rear admiralty by way of expressing his opinion of the entire affair This will not be done without strenuous objections from certain high officials in the Navy Department, but the President, I think, is firmly decided and will not be is that there will be no fight more serious than the Guayama affair until the troops get to San Juan, if there is any then. The men are disappointed. This belief is based on incidents that have transpired.

A Newspaper Diplomatist,

Coamo was one of the places where the Spaniards were said to be gathered for a fight. A newspaper correspondent looking for a horse went beyond the outposts of the town. The Porto Ricans warned him that the Spaniards would catch him and nine of them, armed with pistols, accompanied him almost to Coamo.

Over the brow of a hill they saw a sergeant and five Spanish soldiers. One by one the Porto Ricans fled, but the correspondent did not believe the men were Spaniards until it was too late to run and the only thing left for him to do was to bluff it out. He interpreter stuck close to him.

The Spaniards, with their rifles across their saddles, cocked pistols in their hands and machetes at their sides, called to the correspondent to halt.

He responded that he was an American and wanted to see the Spanish commander.

The sergeant asked him what for, The correspondent said to pave the way to communications looking to the surrender of the town.

The sergeant asked the correspondent if he was authorized to arrange for the surrender

The correspondent said no, but he wanted to see the Spanish commander in order to learn his terms. The sergeant considered a moment and then said he would go for the commander.

Could Not Wait The correspondent asked how long it would take and was told two hours.

The correspondent said he could not wait so long, but would return to the American lines and get proper authorirations and come back and met the Spanish commander at the same place at 5 o'clock next day. He then asked the size of the garrison and the sergeant said 280 men. The correspondent told the sergeant to be sure to have the commander there next morning and the sergeant said he would.

The correspondent returned to his carriage and saluted and lifted his hat. The Spaniards returned the salute. The correspondent got back to iards kept theirs. They brought the alcalde of the town with them, and, not meeting the correspondent or any American officer to surrender to, wrote a letter, stating their terms of capitulation, which they sent in by a Porto Rican.

Guayama, the town just captured, is situated on the south coast of Porto RIco, about five miles inland, and is very nearly as important as Ponce, than which it is but a trifle smaller

No Harbor Connection. It has no harbor communication with the sea, and the invaders had a march of several miles from their landing poin to the attack. Being the third largest town on the Island, the capture of Guayama is a victory of no small significance, highly appreciated, perhaps, because of its easy accomplishment. However, anyone familiar with the situation from a military point of view, will readily recog nize the strategical advantages arising out of its possession by the American

From Guayama inland an excellent road leads to Cayey, between fifteen and twenty miles distant, which place has been him. When he came she accosted him the invasion army as lands on the southern coast. Ponce, Gunyama and Cayey form a triangle, which converges from the first two towns near the south coast line inland half way across the Island to Cayey. All operations against San Juan from the south will be direct Cayey, which communicates with that by rail and good wagon roads. Here Gen, Haines, with his brigade, to gether with al the forces which follow him, will join Gen. Miles The Plans Unfolding,

Gradually the Porto Rican plan o campaign unfolds itself. The invaders will close in upon San Juan from all Landings have already been effected of three of the islands. Gen. Miles landed near the southeastern corner, at Ponce. Gen. Haines near the southwestern corner, at Guayama; Gen. Stone nea northeast corner, at Barcelonita, and Gens. Grant and Coppinger are expected to land at Fajardo, which is near the northeast corner. By the time the American forces, mo capital will be the last chapter of the orto Rican campaign.

The entire island will be practically ecupied before San Juan is attacked.

On the South Coast, Operations were begun on the south coast first, for the reason that some difficulty was expected in taking Ponce and Guayams, and they are the two towns of any importance most distant from the capital. The campaign has been so nicely arranged that the four sections of the invasion army will meet before San Juan almost simultaneously, and then the capital will end the story.

The Department Pleased, The War Department is well pleased with the plans of Gen, Miles as they slowly present themselves. His opera tions command the intense admiration of military experts, who are half inclined to regret that such an chaborately planned campaign should meet with so little re-sistance to rob it of deserved prominence

Real Fight at San Juan, The feeling is still general that the Spaniards will make their only real fight at San Juan. Probably no resistance would have been offered at Gunyama had it not been for the experience of the commander at Ponce, who is now threatened with court-martial for his peaceful surrender. Little fighting is expected in the interior.

There are no towns between Guayama and Cayey, and Gen. Haines will doubtless press forward to the appointed ren-dezvous without delay, leaving only a sufficient force behind to hold the cap-Gen. Monsignor Conaty, rector of the Catholic University in this city, and Dr. William O'Hara, of Philadelphia, are old acquaintances and acknowledge that sort of friendship which enables one man to borrow money from another when occa-

This friendship, a telephone and a clever impersonator are jointly responsible for the story, and for the further fact that a prominent physician of Philadelphia is ooking for a man who robbed him of $10. The other night Dr. O'Hara was called up over his residence phone by a familiar voice. THE PHILADELPHIA REUNION.

Frietion Develops Among Grand Army Men. Richmond, Va., Aug. 8.—It looks as if some disagreeable incident always mars the landable intentions of those good people who wish to bring about kindly feelings between the Northern and Southern veterans of the late war. For several days past the members of Pickett Camp have been making preparations to attend the reunion of the blue and gray at Washington Park on the Delaware, near Philadelphia. They were cordinly invited by several Grand Army posts and other military organizations to take this trip, and a committee even came to Richmond to extend a personal invitation. But there seems to be many ex-Union soldiers in Philadelphia who, for some reason or other, do not care to encourage the cor dial relations of blue and gray.

Several of the Pickett Camp men have eccived letters, both signed and anonymouse, warning the Johnny Rebs against visiting the Quaker City and hinting that they are being made objects of exhibi-tion by the proprietor of a beer garden. Resolutions of the Grand Army Associa-tion, of Philadelphia, adopted in the Quaker City Juli 29, have also been printed and have been shown to the Richmond people. In these resolutions isiting the Quaker City and hinting that Richmond people. Of course, such incidents as those above mentioned are well calculated to give pause to the men who were the gray, but there is another more agreeable side to the question. Col. Frazier, Dr. Jones and others of the committee on invitation, who urread the Plaker, very representation. who urged the Pickett veterans to atte the reunion, positively assert that the of-fer of hospitality was genuine and heart-felt, and that this element apposiion amounts to but little. The gottlement of the friendly faction beg the Pickett men to carry out their plans and to dis-regard the disagreeable matters brought to their attention.

The truth of the whole affair is that there appears to be internal dissension among the Grand Army veterans. At any rate, the indications are that the trip will not be interfered with though some few of the Pickett men have been hesitating since they saw the resolutions adopted by the association. The Rich monders will leave tonight unless thing unforceseen alters their plans.

One Dollar. Wilmington, Del., Aug. 6.-This is the irst of the registration days in the State inder the new constitution, and there is much interest aroused among the politi-

The requirements of the constitution for voting are that a voter shall pay a registration fee of $1 and must be a resiient of the State. There is also a clause designed to prevent bribery and corrup ion under which an applicant for regterration can be made to swear that no one has given him the dollar required or that it has not been paid to him by the party managers. It is designed to ompel every voter to pay his own mony, thus making him free from the party

Just how many each party will lose nder the new requirement is a question many of their voters with tax receipts, and it has cost these voters nothing to cast their ballots. This afternoon the three Democratic clubs of the city issued an appeal to Democrats urging them to register and organizations are the Young Men's Democratic Club, the Bayard Legion and the Democratic League. The address in part suys: The timely declaration of the Democampugn of manhood against mone; meets with the unqualified and entiruse astic approval of our organizations. It is time for all good citizens to unite with the Democratic party and forever eradi-cate the corrupt practice of vote-buying, introduced by the Republican party, and to render the use of money no longer a

Bridgeport, Conn., Aug. 6-Pwenty rears ago Silas Rand Hewitt left his relatives, in this city, in search of fortune in the body could not be taken to Bellevue, the gold fields of the West, A few months afterward word was received here that he had been killed by failing into a ravine. Nothing more was heard

Last night, about II o'clock, the family of Z. V. Hewitt, of Broome Street, were awakened by a knock at the door. Mr. Hewitt answered the summons and found his brother, Silas. The wanderer was joyfully welcomed. In Alaska and Aus-tralia Silas Hewitt found the fortune he sought. He said he sent two letters to his relatives, and not receiving any reply, decided they, too, had gone from Bridge

Saved a Life, But Lost His Own. Camden, N. J., Aug. 6.-There was a sad

off this city yesterday afternoon, in which t boy hero lost his life. He was Jame Carney, twelve years old. He and Frank Fort, ten years old, were swimming in the river with a crowd of other boys about their ages. They were some dis-tance out from the dock when the Fort boy called for help. With the exception of Carney, the other boys became fright-ened and made for the shore. It is supened and made for the shore. It is supposed that Fort was taken with a cramp, He was he pless in the water when Carney reached him. Carney towed him to the shore, and then shere were plenty of hands to lift the helpless boy out of the water onto the plet. Carney was exhausted by his hard swim in supporting the burden of his companion's body, and when he reached the shore could hardly move. Just as he released his hold on Fort he sunk and did not rise. move. Just as he re-Fort he sunk and did not rise.

DIES IN AN AMBULANCE. The Hospital Wagon Is Wreeked in

New York, Aug. 6.-Mrs. Jennie Callahan, thirty-two years old, the wife of ex-Assemblyman Michael J. Callahan, of the Fourth district, committed suicide last night in her home, at No. 71 Secand Avenue, by taking a large quantity of earlielle acid. An ambulance was called from Bellevue, but the woman died on the way to the hospital. husband thinks she was insane. says that he had noticed lately that she was given to melancholy spells. Her home life was happy. On the way to the hospital two men in a carriage got in the way of the ambu lance, and a collision was unavoidable One of the rear wheels of the ambulance was demolfshed, and the woman who had died a moment before was almost thrown from the vehicle. A policeman placed both men under arrest, and they were taken to the Fifth Street Station and locked up on the charge of reckless driving. Since the woman was dead, and it was temporarily placed in the Fifth Street Station. Later the hus-band had an undertaker prepare the
